OZ Minerals' corporate head office to relocate to Adelaide Airport

Prominent South Australian mining company, OZ Minerals will relocate its corporate head office to Adelaide Airport's rapidly growing Airport Business District in mid 2018.

Adelaide Airport has appointed Sarah Constructions and Studio Nine Architects to convert an office/warehouse unit, in what was formerly Export Park and now part of the airport's wider Airport Business District, to provide high quality office accommodation on ground floor and mezzanine.

The open plan office will retain its industrial feel and can accommodate up to 80 people.

Adelaide Airport Managing Director, Mark Young, said attracting companies of the calibre of OZ Minerals signalled a significant repositioning and refresh of the Airport Business District, in line with the airport's Vision to be a top tier business centre in the Asia Pacific region.

"There are clear benefits for OZ Minerals moving to Adelaide Airport, giving them easier air access to their Prominent Hill and Carrapateena mining sites as well as national and international markets," Mr Young said.

"OZ Minerals is a modern, progressive mining company and one of South Australia's real success stories, so we're excited that they've chosen to relocate their head office to the Airport Business District.

"It's part of the realisation of our vision to create a globally connected, next generation hub with designated industry clusters connected in a seamless manner.

"There's significant infrastructure work underway, including the construction of the 165-room Atura Hotel, which is due to open in late 2018. This hotel will provide first-class business and conference facilities that will help companies do business without having to leave the airport.

"Expansion of the domestic and international terminal is also expected to get underway in the first half of 2018."

OZ Minerals will join other major international companies that have recently relocated to the Airport Business District including Otis Elevators and Stenhoj Group.

Recent or current infrastructure projects include:

- Aldi supermarket - opened in August
- Beau's Pet Hotel (Guide Dogs SA) - opened in August
- Royal Flying Doctor Service new headquarters
- Medstar's emergency medical retrieval base due for practical completion in November
